KNOW WHAT YOU WILL TAKE

It is time to begin planning your work for the second semester. You have worked your way through one half of the year. Are you satisfied with the schedule you have carried! Is there not some other study you would rather have taken than one of those you soon will be examined in?

Many students make the mistake of planning their work after their study cards are in their hands. As a result they wish afterward that they had taken a different course. Few per sons get the advantage of two college courses. It is too late to do things differently after they are out of school. Each person should keep in mind the studies that will be of use to him in the work he expects to undertake. The selection of his work, even for one semester, is not a matter than can be decided best in the few hours one has in which to fill out and return his card. He should know before he begins what he wants. There should be no study in his course that he is taking simply to have the required number of hours. Unless he is interested in his work and can expect it to be of advantage to him later, he is wasting his time by taking it. In a university, with all its branches of study, there is enough work that will appeal to a student without his having to pursue subjects merely for credit toward a degree.

THE MONOTONY OF DAILY LIFE

Because men often find the duties of one day similar to the duties of preceding days they speak of life as monotonous. For them the days continue to come with dull uniformity, an irksome sameness without variety.

which others from lack of application call menetony.

Students, or those who bear the name students, often tire of work or study and speak of each day as being monotonous. They feel the continuous round of recitations weighing upon them. But are those who make the charge of monotony really in love with their work? The man who really desires knowledge finds little sameness in his work from day to day for an alert active mind knows no monot-
